

Bnhhh 2250killer, Everton hills

Thus began Killer's Everton Hills odyssey. Just under 7km of a rather unsubtle diet of roller coaster hills (see attachment), a few regroupings and a plethora of remarked trail following yesterday arvo's deluge. With 2.5 runners (Nokia gave up after a while), the regroupings were appreciated but pointless, but a warm evening made for an enjoyable canter/ trot/ limp/ hobble. We were welcomed back to the vast expanse of Killer's new pristine kitchen, with clearly enough bench space for the boiled beef, cabbage, mash and peas so that we were not nutritionally disappointed, though there was some commentary about parsley in the potatoes (I'm not sure some hashers like green stuff!). Anyway, thanks Killer, literally a killer of a run. On On SC

Jokes

Dog reprised a story about hygiene and using tongs. Quite amusing but then we had to use the same tongs for the mash. Not so amusing!
